1. BACKGROUND AND OVERVIEW OF THE PROJECT

1.1 INTRODUCTION

Alfred Nzo District Municipality is made up of four local municipalities namely: Umzimvubu Local Municipality, Matatiele Local Municipality; Mbizana Local Municipality, and Ntabankulu Municipality. Within the district cultural diversity exists with population groups coming from amaXesibe, amaMpondo, amaBhaca, abeSotho, and amaHlubi. Alfred Nzo District is the home of two major revolutionary legends in the name of O.R. Tambo and Alfred Baphethuxolo Nzo. It is also home to our local heroes and heroines whom have played an important role in our local communities within the District be it in the aspect of development or politically to better and improve the lives of Alfred Nzo District.

The Pondoland revolt referred to as the action taken by iKongo to reject tribal authorities and self-government of Transkei, initiated by the Bantu Authorities Act of 1951. During a protest gathering in the district of Bizana, Saul Mabude, a tribal authority, was called to explain the Act to the people. His refusal to address the group angered the people to such an extent that they destroyed his house and livestock. The police were called in and a number of people were hurt in the chaos or arrested.

Following the Bizana protests, several such incidences occurred thereafter. As a result of this revolt, meetings were banned. People responded by organizing secretly on mountains at Mbizana (Ingquza hill, Nonqulwana hill, Khananda hill, Ndlovu hill) and formed a movement. Spies and loyalists to the tribal authorities informed on these activities, the violent treatment of informers created tension between the activists and the local people. On the 6th of June police helicopters dropped teargas on a gathering on Ngquza Hill. This was followed with open fire on the crowd and eleven people were killed. Police presence in the area was increased and a commission of inquiry was appointed, made up of Bantu

Administration officials. The commission was clearly biased and its findings were rejected. People intensified their struggle. The return of a political activist, Anderson Ganyile, a member of the African National Congress Youth League further strengthened the local leadership. As the struggles in the Transkei spiraled, the government declared a state of emergency in November 1960. Thousands of people were detained without being charged or tried. Between August and October 1961, 30 Pondo people were sentenced to death for their participation in the revolt.

The Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC) heard details of these events and decided that the remains of the twenty-three men that had been executed in Pretoria and buried in a Mamelodi cemetery, were to be exhumed and returned to Pondoland for reburial. This was done following the provisions outlined by the National Heritage Resources Act of 1999 for the handling of remains of victims of conflict connected with the liberation struggle.

It is against this background that the District saw it necessary to celebrate its unsung heroes and heroines that specifically come from Alfred Nzo District.
